

Gazing at Christ

Tuesday, 30 October 2018

It often begins with a casual look at a line of scripture or an event of the day and then, we find ourselves wondering what it all means. We gaze at the ordinary words, but we are drawn to the mystery. It is near us, we can touch it but it's also far from us, we don't understand the details. But the more we gaze, the more the meaning and the details unfold.

Gazing at Christ demands our time. It demands our attention. It demands our presence. It demands courage, the courage to let go our own reality. For when we gaze at Him, we find ourselves drawn to the reality of His kingdom. Without knowing it, we lose track of time, and of our fears and concerns as we are caught up in the wonder of God's Presence.

But there is something more about gazing at Christ, "It offer us transformations we can't imagine".

Evelyn had a very rough day. She was frustrated. However, she casually looked at the crucifix, but before she knew it, she broke into tears. She couldn't contain the joy of knowing how much she is loved by God. She was transformed and filled with gratitude.

Fr. Francis Afu
dabar.online